A WORD FROM THE SECRETARY.

Our progressing years and the disturbances of war have somewhat limited and made irregular the gatherings of the Class since the Twenty-fifth Anniversary. It did not seem wise to attempt any special celebration in 1914, and immediately thereafter came the war. In 1915, on February 15th, the Boston members of the Class gave a dinner to those living outside, at the Harvard Club. Seventy men were present and Thayer presided; his last appearance with members of the Class. The New York men gave a dinner to the Class on February 26th, 1916, at the Harvard Club, New York, at which Rand presided. Seventy-one men were present. In 1917 the Boston men again gave a dinner on February 10th at the Harvard Club, at which Bolster presided. In 1918 we were in the thick of the war, and, as any idea of a public celebration seemed inappropriate, no dinner was given that year. On February 21, 1919, however, the pleasant custom was revived, and the New York members gave a dinner at the Harvard Club of New York, over which Wardner presided and which fifty-three men attended.

Our Thirtieth Anniversary in June, 1918, we did not attempt to celebrate by any special events. We were all aroused by the war and too serious and too distracted to think of having any elaborate celebration. We merely postponed it, however, and in June, 1919, celebrated our Thirty-first Anniversary, a somewhat irregular proceeding, as class affairs go, but which proved as enjoyable as if it had happened to be our Thirtieth Anniversary. On June 17th we had luncheon at Ike Thomas's so-called farm, "Monstone Farm," Ipswich. We went down by autos and incidentally stopped at Bert Gale's life-saving station, which he had thoughtfully established for us on the coast of Swampscott. After the wreckage of our onslaught had been cleared away Mrs. Gale, on the same day, entertained the wives and some of the daughters of the Class at luncheon. On Wednesday, June 18th, the members and their wives and numerous daughters and some sons lunched at the Oakley Country Club in Watertown, and then went to the Harvard-Yale ball game on Soldiers' Field. On that evening we dined at the Tavern Club in Boston. Ninety men were present. Swarts presided and there was speaking by Adams, Choate, G. A. Carpenter, the Secretary, Wardner, Sedgwick, and Thomas. Lund read an original poem.

Of course the Class has met every Commencement Day at its regular headquarters, 1, Holworthy. In addition to these more formal meetings the Boston members of the Class have given two subscription dinners; the first on January 24, 1918, at the Harvard Club and the second on May 8, 1918, at the Union Club, Boston. It is planned to have some dinners by subscription this year, and it is to be hoped that the dinners in Boston and New York for the whole Class by invitation may be continued.

It is somewhat interesting to note that as diners we are far ahead of our contemporaries, and that no class within ten years of us shows so large an attendance of members either at the formal or informal dinners. The Secretary sincerely hopes that the severe drought now upon us will not wither our good-fellowship.

Some of the facts concerning the members and their sons have been reduced to figures and may be interesting.

This report is incomplete in information concerning many of the members. The Secretary expresses regret that all his efforts have produced such meagre replies. He has the comforting thought, however, that each man who has replied, "nothing new" or "just the same" or who has failed to reply at all, is estopped from any possible criticism of the incompleteness of the report.

The Secretary is especially desirous of receiving some word concerning the following men:

Backus, Cuningham, Davidson, Foster, Goodhue, Hamblen, Henry, Keasbey, Lilienthal, Milliken, W. E. Mills, Seelye, Seip, C. W. Smith, and Sondheim.

The Secretary wishes to express his thanks for the many courtesies extended by the Harvard Records Office in placing all its information at his disposal.

* This is based upon all available reports but undoubtedly is incomplete. An excess of modesty probably has caused numerous failures to report actual service of this character.

RECORDS OF THE CLASS

Walter Abbott

Born	Feb. 15, 1867, Boston, Mass.
Died	March 25, 1919, Boston, Mass.
Parents	Jere Abbott and Ellen Maria Bangs.
Married	Helen Frances Jaffray, of New York, at Paris, France, June 12, 1912.

Abbott had continued to live abroad until the early part of 1919. Although he had been in poor health for a long time, when the war broke out in 1914 he immediately took an active part in the organization of relief work, and in December went to Paris, where he had charge of the office of The American War Relief Clearing House. When that work was taken over by the Red Cross he continued with that organization. At a later period he rented a chateau near Blois, to which city American officers were ordered for purposes of reclassification. Blois was one of the saddest spots in France, and Abbott deliberately went there with his wife with the purpose of helping the men there.

CHARLES FRANCIS ADAMS

Born	Aug. 2, 1866, Quincy, Mass.
Parents	John Quincy Adams and Fanny Crowninshield.

	Charles Francis, 2d, May 5, 1910.
Address	(Office), 50 State Street, Boston, Mass.
	(Home), Concord, Mass.

Adams wrote in 1918: "Another five years spent in the old occupation of attending to other people's affairs, notably those of the college, offers little of romance, and I regret to say that I know of neither success nor disaster, public or private, which justifies a record."

Adams is a director in more corporations than any other man in New England. When he is not attending to these, and to the college, he finds time to devote to sailing. In the summer of 1914 he had charge of the Resolute, chosen to race the Shamrock IV for the America cup.

patrol with a British officer and eleven men. During an encounter with a German patrol he became separated from his companions and took refuge in a shell hole. He remained there for over eighteen hours, and the following night managed to work back to the English lines. He gave a vivid account of his experiences in a letter to his mother, extracts from which were published in the Harvard Bulletin.

Amory's oldest son, Copley, Jr., served in the A. E. F. as a second lieutenant of Cavalry.

WILLIAM BARNES

Born Nov. 17, 1866, Albany, N. Y.
Parents William Barnes and Emily P. Weed.
Married Grace Davis, Cincinnati, Ohio, June 12, 1888.
Children Thurlow Weed, 2d, June 6, 1889, A.B., 1912.

Landon, March 31, 1894 (1915-16), Class of 1919.
Address 29 East 48th Street, New York, N. Y.

For twelve years Barnes was Surveyor of Customs at the Port of Albany. In 1892 he was elected a member of the Republican State Committee from his Congressional District, and remained a member of that Committee until 1914, when he voluntarily retired from it. He was chairman of its Executive Committee from 1898 to 1906, and chairman of the Committee from 1911 to 1914. He was the member from the State of New York in the National Republican Committee from 1912 to 1916, and chairman of its Advisory Committee in the campaign of 1912.

At the election of 1914 he was elected a member of the Constitutional Convention of the State of New York, which assembled in the spring of 1915. In that body he was chairman of the Committee on Legislative Powers and Limitations, and brought in from that Committee a recommendation for an amendment to the Constitution of the State, as follows:—

> "The legislature shall not pass any bill granting hereafter to any class of individuals any privilege or immunity not granted equally to all members of the State."

This amendment was defeated in the Convention by a vote of 92 to 45. His purpose in advocating this amendment was to make class legislation unconstitutional, so that the granting of privilege by the legislature of New York should be prohibited, holding that in a government based upon equality the granting of inequality was the reserved right of the people, and should not properly be a legislative power. His proposal was aimed at punitive groups which frighten legislatures into enacting laws which he believed the majority of the voters themselves would not countenance.

Barnes is not now connected with the Republican organization in any official capacity. He has been building for the last two years, and has just completed a beautiful building of Flemish architecture on the new Plaza at Albany, as a home for the Evening Journal. The building is one of the most remarkable in the State, and was opened for business on Lincoln's birthday of 1917.

His son, Landon, was Chief Boatswain's Mate, U.S.N.R. He entered the service in April, 1916. Thurlow Weed Barnes was a second lieutenant, Reclamation Service.

JOHN DANIEL BARRY

Parents	Alexander Bliss and Eleanor Taylor Albert.

Bliss is still at Johns Hopkins. He was chairman of a committee for study and development of a dormitory system for the university. This committee, starting without prejudice in favor of traditional ways of housing students, made an independent study of what had been done here and in England, and recommended a system very different from any in this country. Its plans, with estimates for cost and operation, had just been presented when the outbreak of the war made their prosecution impossible.

EDWARD LUDLAM BLOSSOM

Born	Dec. 19, 1867, Brooklyn, N. Y.
Parents	Josiah Blackwell Blossom and Grace Parish Ludlam.
Married	Maud Bayliss, of London, England, Oct. 4, 1910, at Pasadena, Cal.; died June 11, 1915, at Los Angeles, Cal.

In 1916 Blossom became associated with the Research Corporation of 63 Wall Street, New York City. This organization controls the Cottrell Process of Electrical Precipitation, largely used in metallurgical plants. For a time he had charge of the Pittsburg office of this corporation, and in December, 1917, opened an office for it in Salt Lake City.

More recently his headquarters have been in New York. He reports that he is still in the best of spirits, and that his most serious regret is that he was too old to fight in the great war. He is a member of the American Electro-Chemical Society and the American Institute of Mining Engineers.

Died Dec. 29, 1913, New York, N. Y.

At the class meeting held on Commencement day in 1914 the following memorial of Boas was placed on the records of the class:

"Melvin Edward Boas died at New York, N. Y., December 29, 1913.

"In college, because of his retiring nature he was not widely acquainted, but those who were fortunate in knowing him well were greatly attached to him. He was honorable, genial, witty, and he loved his fellowmen.

"His classmates desire to express their appreciation of these qualities, and to place this memorial on the records of the Class."

Maxime Bôcher

Born Aug. 28, 1867, Boston, Mass.
Died Sept. 12, 1918, Cambridge, Mass.
Parents Ferdinand Bôcher and Caroline Little.
Degrees Ph.D., Göttingen, Germany, 1891.
Married Marie Niemann, Göttingen, Germany, July 21, 1891.
Children Helen, 1892, A.B., 1914, Radcliffe.
Esther, 1893.
Frederick, 1898, A.B., 1918.

In 1913-14, Bôcher was Exchange Professor from Harvard at the Sorbonne in Paris, and delivered a course of lectures on advanced mathematics. These have been published in Paris in French, the language in which they were delivered. From 1907 to 1913 he was editor-in-chief of the Transactions of the American Mathematical Society.

Professor Arthur G. Webster of Clark University wrote of Bôcher:

"Maxime Bôcher was, according to the nature of his subject, little known to the general public. The son of the late Professor Ferdinand Bôcher, the genial scholar, who was at the head of the department of French a generation ago, Maxime early displayed those signs of talent in other lines, mainly mathematical, that justified the statement of the psychologist that 'though genius is hereditary, its particular form is accidental.'

"Of all subjects of scientific research practiced mathematics is least understood by the laity. A mathematician is supposed to be a man capable of rapidly adding up a column of figures or of extracting the roots of large numbers in his head. Few there be, even graduates of our so-called great universities, who know that the higher mathematics begins, not with algebra or trigonometry, but with the infinitesimal calculus. That mathematics is dry is a superstition of those who know nothing about it. To him possessed of its mysteries the muse of mathematics is fair as that of music. In this select circle Maxime Bôcher held a high place. This is not the place to describe his researches on differential equations or to give the names of the more than one hundred papers that constitute his last memorial. Unlike many mathematicians, Bôcher was an extremely clear teacher and aroused the enthusiasm of his many students."

Bôcher's son, Frederick, was a member of the Students' Army Training Corps at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

CHARLES BOHLEN

Born	Jan. 14, 1866, Philadelphia, Pa.
Parents	John Bohlen and Priscilla Murray.
Married	Celestine Eustis, Aiken, S. C., Jan. 14, 1902.
Children	Henry Morgan, Dec. 13, 1902.
	Charles Eustis, Aug. 31, 1904.
	Ellen Murray, Nov. 22, 1905.
Address	County Road, Ipswich, Mass.

Bohlen seems to have distinguished himself by being the oldest living student in undergraduate courses. During the winters of 1916-17 and 1917-18 he attended some courses at Harvard in English and History. He writes: "I made quite a sensation among the undergraduates with my bald head." In normal times he divides his residence between Ipswich, Massachusetts, in the summer and Boston or Aiken, S. C., in the winter. During the war he worked with the Red Cross.

WILFRED BOLSTER

Born	Sept. 13, 1866, Roxbury, Mass.
Parents	Solomon Alonzo Bolster and Sarah Jane Gardner.
Degrees	LL.B., 1891.
Married	Jeanie T. Pond, Roxbury, Mass., Oct. 4, 1893, by Herman Page.
Children	Philip Wilfred, Sept. 23, 1897; in college, Class of 1920. Robert Pond, May 22, 1900. Gardner Thurston, June 20, 1906.
Address	(Office), Court House, Boston, Mass.

Bolster writes: "Since the last report I pursued the even tenor of my judicial way, with side excursions into amateur farming and annual fishing trips, until the fall of 1917, when I was appointed chairman of the Legal Advisory Board of Boston, a committee of three, charged with the mobilization of the bar to aid in the operation of the Selective Service Law, chiefly by aiding the 60,000 odd registrants in the city to fill out their questionnaires, secure proper classification and the like. We drafted, for unpaid and arduous service, for a couple of months, over 500 of the leading lawyers in the city. It is pleasant to be able to say that the response was prompt and general. Slackers were a negligible quantity. During this same period I served as chairman of a state Central Legal Advisory Committee of five (including Choate, '88) created to secure uniformity in the workings of the law at the hands of the Exemption and Legal Advisory Boards of the state. Our functions were mainly of interpretation; an interesting and novel excursion of lawyers into a land devoid of precedents. If we made mistakes, we at least do not admit it.

"These temporary diversions are about over for the present at least, but they have afforded at least one lawyer of non-combatant age a welcome opportunity to do his bit."

His son, Philip Wilfred, was a second lieutenant, U.S.A.

BENJAMIN LEONARD BOODRY

Born June 29, 1863, Mattapoisett, Mass.
Parents Benjamin Leonard Boodry and Mary Sherman Washburn.
Married Hannah Gertrude Welch, Brockton, Mass., Feb. 25, 1908.

Fordyce Huntington Bottum

Born Jan. 12, 1866, New Haven, Vt.
Died Feb. 15, 1919, Milwaukee, Wis.
Parents Elias S. Bottum and Mary M. Hoyt.

Bottum died suddenly of heart disease at his rooms in the University Club of Milwaukee on the morning of February 15, 1919. He had continued the practice of law in that city, and in the course of his professional work, had traveled extensively in this country. In his last letter to the Secretary, he wrote: "I have not accumulated any fads for old books, furniture, dogs or a wife, nor have I accumulated any large amount of money."

Bottum was admitted to the bar in Milwaukee in 1891, after study in a law office in that city. He practiced there until his death, being a member with his older brother of the firm of Flanders, Bottum, Fawcett and Bottum from 1911-1917, and from 1917 as a member of the firm of Bottum, Bottum, Hudnall and Lecher. He was in corporation practice and his clients represented a large number of very important industrial firms. He was a member of the University Club of Milwaukee, the Milwaukee Club, and the Milwaukee and Wisconsin State Bar Associations. At his funeral service the Rev. C. H. Beale said of him:

"He was a man whose life moved in somewhat limited bounds. He was independent in spirit, diligent and proficient in the practice of his profession, ardent in his friendships, interested more in the world of his own thoughts and studies than in the manifold activities of the world about.

"Behind a somewhat brusque manner he possessed a kindly spirit, a sympathetic and generous heart. In unostentatious ways his thoughtfulness and generosity found expression, and many were his deeds of benevolence known only to the recipient or those who were nearest to him."

Bottum had not been in close touch with many of his classmates since graduation. Those who knew him in college, and had the fortune to meet him in later years can best appreciate the truth of the quoted words.

Joseph Henry Bowen

Born	March 18, 1866, Fall River, Mass.
Died	April 16, 1918, Fall River, Mass.
Parents	Joseph A. Bowen and Fanny M. Corey.
Married	Mary S. Whitney, Cambridge, Mass., June 19, 1890.

	Harold Corey, May 26, 1896.
	Edward Hooper, Oct. 14, 1899.

The death of "Joe" Bowen, one of the most loyal members of our class, came as a personal loss to many of us. In his quiet, unobtrusive manner he always made himself felt.

After leaving college Bowen identified himself with the interests of his native city of Fall River, Massachusetts. Entering the employ of his father, who had one of the largest coal businesses of that city, he, on the death of his father, incorporated the business in 1915, becoming the president of the company. He was also president and director of the Laurel Lake Mills, and a director of the Seaconnet Mills, the Arkwright Mills, and the Metacomet National Bank.

His married life was unusually happy, and his three sons were his chums. We who knew him intimately in his college days shall always remember his amiable temper, courtesy, and gentle manner. Wherever he went he left behind him not a single enemy, but only a host of sincere and affectionate friends.

A. L. H.

His son, Harold Corey, saw service in the navy, and at one time was a chief petty officer on the U.S.S. Dupont.

FREDERICK JOSIAH BRADLEE

Born March 28, 1866, Boston, Mass.

In 1914 the Old Colony Trust Company purchased the Bay State Trust Company. Bradlee was appointed actuary of the Old Colony Trust Company, and has been in charge of its branch at the location formerly occupied by the Bay State Trust Company.

His son, Frederick Josiah, was a second lieutenant, Infantry, and was stationed at Governor's Island, N. Y.

Graham Hunting Brewer

Born Sept. 9, 1867, South Orange, N. J.
Died Aug. 24, 1913, New York, N. Y.
Parents William Augustus Brewer, Jr., and Bella Calvert Fisher.
Married Alice Humphrey, South Orange, N. J., April 28, 1892.
Children Theodore Graham, May 13, 1895.
Graham Hunting, Nov. 20, 1899.
Elsie, Jan. 19, 1903.

Graham Hunting Brewer died at New York on August 24, 1913. He was present at the celebration in June and appeared in excellent condition. Towards the middle of August he complained of a severe pain in his head. He was in a New York hospital for treatment when death came very suddenly, probably due to an abscess on the brain.

In college and later Brewer was deservedly popular from his unfailing interest in his classmates and evident great enjoyment in meeting them. His life had not been easy and he had suffered severe business disappointments, but his courage was high, and he kept up a brave fight for what appeared to be ultimate success. For about twenty years he was connected with the Washington Life Insurance Company of New York. He was also trustee of the village of South Orange.

At a meeting of the Class held on Commencement Day, 1914, the following memorial was passed:

"The news of the death of Graham Hunting Brewer during the summer of 1913, following so soon our Twenty-fifth Anniversary reunion in which he took a joyous part, came as a great shock to the Class. Conspicuous for his devotion to his college classmates, happy in their company, retaining the spirit of youth to a remarkable degree, he is one whom we shall especially miss at other reunions. We, therefore, at this first Commencement following his death inscribe upon the records of the Class he loved so well this minute of our sorrow and affection."

ALBERT GALLATIN BRODHEAD

Born	June 14, 1867, Philadelphia, Pa.
Parents	Daniel Dingman Brodhead and Mary Ann Broderick.
Address	University Club, Denver, Colo.

Brodhead has never reported before, and after a very long lapse of time gives a full account of his life. He left college in November of 1887 on account of illness, but recovered too late to return and graduate with the Class. For a time he served on the Engineering Corps of the Lehigh Valley Railroad, and in October of 1888 returned to college and received his degree in June of 1889. After graduation he returned to the Lehigh Valley Railroad and remained there until 1893. In the fall of 1893 he went to Colorado, where he was manager of the Brodhead Coal Properties at Brodhead, Colorado, and in Huerfano County, Colorado. In the last few years he has not been in active business, and has spent considerable time traveling in this country and abroad.

CAUSTEN BROWNE

Born May 6, 1866, Boston, Mass.
Parents Causten Browne and Katharine Eveleth Maynadier.
Married Caroline Wilhelmina Ziegler, Salt Lake City, Utah, Oct. 18, 1899.
Children Katharine Maynadier, July 1, 1903.
Address (Office), Walker Bros., Salt Lake City, Utah.
(Home), 769 First Avenue, Salt Lake City, Utah.

Browne writes: "Things have been very much the same with me since the Twenty-fifth, and Utah went dry on August 1, 1917. No one can be expected to do justice to the Secretary's request for a 'full report' who lives in a dry territory."

Thomas Quincy Browne

Born Aug. 3, 1866, Boston, Mass.
Died Aug. 27, 1914, Morristown, N. J.
Parents Thomas Quincy Browne and Juliet Frances Wheildon.
Degrees A.M., Columbia University, 1907.
Married Isabel Gibson, New York, N. Y., Dec. 19, 1912.

Tom Browne died in August, 1914. I shall never forget that late summer evening of the day preceding his death—when the sun, a great ball of molten fire, vaster in diameter than I had ever before seen it, sank behind the woods and Infirmary Building in which he was lying, and the whole sky was suffused with a crimson light of unwonted heavenly beauty. I could not then be sure what it portended, but now I can see it was the lighting of a great soul into Eternity.

That Tom Browne was a great soul there is no doubt. Few men could have won the victory which he did over ill health, and have made of life, in his case all too short, what he did in devotion and accomplishment. We all like to remember him as in college days—of uncommon fineness and delicacy of mold, both in body and mind, but ready to dare anything. It was a good thing to be with him then, and our life and generation in college was the better and finer for his presence among us.

His range was unusual. Out of doors he was at home in every clime, and he liked to take part in almost every sport, and excelled in many. Always of a speculative cast of mind and a seeker after truth, he turned again after a business experience which carried him to many remote parts of western South America, to a more intensive study of the science of geology which had always particularly attracted him, and in due time he received the Master's degree in this subject at Columbia. His fondness for this work made his teaching of the sciences in the School of particular value, and he did a great deal toward establishing in its curriculum that progressive co-ordination of scientific subjects so strongly emphasized in modern education.

Trustee and treasurer of the School from its inception, for sixteen years his devotion to its interests was untiring. No detail was too small for his painstaking care, while his vision and unswerving loyalty did much to guide its policies and establish its traditions. He early grasped the principles of educational reactions in school discipline, which comes from giving boys a large measure of responsibility in this direction, and was an ardent advocate and clear expounder of the system gradually taking shape in the School.

For all too brief a space he experienced the rare fullness of life that came with his marriage in December, 1912, to Miss Isabel Gibson of New York, but a little more than a year and a half later he was stricken with typhoid fever in the later summer of 1914. He fought the first symptoms of an unaccountable indisposition, in the same heroic fashion that he faced other illnesses, without arriving, even from expert professional advice, at an understanding of the malady until, almost before it was realized, its ravages had gone too far to be stayed.

No fairer measure of the spirit of his service and final accomplishments can be found than that expressed by the boys of the School themselves in a tablet erected by them in his memory:

"To the memory of Thomas Quincy Browne, Jr., one of the founders of Morristown School, who was a strength from its earliest years and a friend and close comrade to the last; whose example has enabled us to enjoy to their fullest extent our life and our work, with the aid of whom no difficulty was unconquerable; who gave to the School and through it to the world freely and ungrudgingly all that he had of talents and of love and the most productive years of his life.

"Erected by the boys of the School—1915."

Walter Franklin Brush

Born Sept. 27, 1865, Rye, N. H.
Died Dec. 24, 1919, Richmond, Mass.
Parents Walter Franklin Brush and Maria Hill Merriam.

Brush wrote in 1918: "There is no new matter to report; just more of the same. No articles of a scientific or literary nature published, no new official positions occupied. You will be quite sure of leaving nothing out."

Brush had been in exceedingly poor health for some time before his death and no recent word had been received from him.

After graduation he studied law at Columbia and practised for some years in New York. He then studied theology at Cambridge and at Young's Theological Seminary in New York. He was never ordained as a minister however. He had been greatly interested in philanthropical work. He founded the East Side Settlement House and the Society for Italian Immigrants. For his work in connection with the latter organization, he was decorated by the King of Italy.

Brush was also active in the affairs of the Charity Organization Society and the Manhattan Trade School, both of New York.

MYRON LUTHER BRUUER

Born June 17, 1865, Springfield, Mass.
Parents Myron Bruuer and Laura H. Luce.
Degrees A.M., 1895.
Address Wilbraham, Mass.

Bruuer is still on his farm in Wilbraham. He writes that his part in the war was helping to increase production.

CYRIL HERBERT BURDETT

Born Oct. 3, 1865, Charlestown, Mass.
Parents Michael Benton Burdett and Albina Long.
Married Winella White Stratton, Boston, Mass., Feb. 21, 1890.
Children Adopted, Jasper, now fifteen years old.
Address (Office), 135 Broadway, New York, N. Y.
(Home; winter), 69 Montague Street, Brooklyn, N. Y.
(Home; summer), Ridgefield, Conn.

Burdett is vice-president of the New York Title and Mortgage Company and is an officer in each of its allied corporations. He writes:

"I seem to have reached that period in life where I have found my niche and am occupying it, and probably will be found at the same stand, I hope, for a number of years to come. I therefore will have to say that the story which I told for the last report still holds true for the present."

ARTHUR PIERCE BUTLER

Born April 21, 1866, Boston, Mass.
Parents Edward Knowles Butler and Frances Elizabeth Lewis Pierce.

Married Lydia Raquet Farnham, Cambridge, Mass., Aug. 9, 1906.
Children Arthur Pierce, Jr., June 23, 1908.
Edwin Farnham, Aug. 19, 1909.
Address Morristown School, Morristown, N. J.

Butler spent the winter of 1913-1914 in Rome with his family, and in the spring made a long wished for pilgrimage to Sicily and Greece. He reached home just before the war broke out.

At the time of Browne's fatal sickness, Butler was seriously sick with the same disease. Upon Woodman's retirement as head master of the Morristown School, Butler was appointed to that position. The School is now filled to capacity with 114 pupils, and the system of student self-government has produced exceptionally favorable results. The boys now manage the whole mechanism of the schoolroom, control the higher dormitories, and, subject only to the Discipline Committee of the Masters, exercise full disciplinary power. So far has this principle been developed that on two occasions, when it was desirable for the whole staff to be absent for a brief period, the entire charge of the School was left to the boys—a situation heretofore unheard of in boarding-school life.

Three sons of classmates, graduates of the School, were in the service: Dudley Hale, Fred Clement, and Ben Carpenter.

Butler was a member of the Morristown Battalion of the New Jersey State Militia Reserve, and during the war chairman of the Liberty Loan organization of Monroe, New Jersey.

Charles Mills Cabot

Born April 12, 1866, Brookline, Mass.
Died Sept. 5, 1915, Beverly, Mass.
Parents James Elliot Cabot and Elizabeth Dwight.
Married Caroline Elizabeth Perkins, Brookline, Mass., Sept. 21, 1893.
Children Frances Anne, 1894 (1910-12 at Bryn Mawr).
James Elliot, 1899.
Sarah Sullivan, 1904.

At the direction of the Class a sketch of Cabot's life and a memorial prepared by two of his closest friends was published in 1916, and is here reproduced:

Charles Mills Cabot was born at Brookline on April 12, 1866, the son of James Elliot Cabot and Elizabeth (Dwight) Cabot. He graduated from the college in 1888 and soon after engaged in the stock brokerage business in Boston. In 1891 he became a member of the firm of Moors & Cabot, and continued a partner until 1915, when he retired. His business life had been highly honorable and financially successful. For several years he had not been in robust health but hoped and reasonably expected many years of usefulness after relief from the strain of active work. But this was not to be for he died at his home in Beverly on September 5, 1915. He had served the Class as its treasurer since 1909, and this duty, as all others, he performed with scrupulous care and sagacity.

On September 21, 1893, he married Caroline Elizabeth Perkins of Brookline. They had three children, Frances Anne, born in 1894, James Elliot in 1899, and Sarah Sullivan in 1904.

Such are the bare facts. The memorial prepared by two of his closest friends helps to fill the picture of our kindly, honorable, and courageous classmate and friend.

CHARLES MILLS CABOT

Our class lost a stanch member in the passing of Charles M. Cabot, for with him loyalty and sincerity were inborn qualities. To the class at large his actions were evidence of this, while to those intimate with him it was ever clear that he thought as classmates almost as of kith and kin. He was happy in '88 men's successes and sad in their misfortunes in a peculiarly personal way. By nature rather undemonstrative, his feelings, though deeply grounded, were not always expressed or apparent, but they were very genuine. Though reticent in expressing approval or censure, there was ever a sense of true allegiance, an underlying, innate devotion.

He was honest to a fault, if that be possible! Honest to a cause, to a principle, to a friend, to one not a friend, to himself. Warm of heart, strong of will and quick in decision, he never dwelt for a moment in that shadow land between principle and self-interest; he was ever anxious to aid where he could; unselfish in the deepest sense, he was happiest in making others happy. When misunderstood, as all at times are, he trudged honestly on, seldom speaking of regret or denunciation.

As a young man somewhat proud, he developed and expanded to a splendid and beautiful warmth and breadth. But he retained through this growth a native simplicity which was ever a joy to his friends. There was no trace of affectation, nor did he in any way assume to be what he was not, but he was always simple and straightforward.

At graduation the problem confronted him as to what he should do; he tried one or two vocations before determining upon that which became his life work. At this he made a marked success. A true democrat by nature and always ready to champion the cause of social justice, perhaps the most notable, and certainly the most picturesque, episode of his life was his campaign against the United States Steel Corporation for the purpose of obtaining better working conditions for its employees.

It was in 1908 that he was first aroused to a realization of the wretched housing conditions of the laborer in Pittsburgh by an article in the Survey. He made a protest, as a stockholder, to the headquarters of the Company in New York. Within a year, his protest, combined with pressure of the local health board, resulted in tearing down three rows of wretched hovels, owned by the Company and rented to its employees. This measure of success led him to enlist the co-operation of other stockholders in bettering the hours of labor, and other working conditions then prevalent, and he called upon the Steel Corporation for a list of its stockholders that he might circulate among them a report of the scientific investigation which he had caused to be made at his expense, of working conditions among the laborers in Pittsburgh. At his first interview with the Chairman of the United States Steel Corporation he introduced himself as "a damnfool small stockholder." Upon the refusal of his request, nothing daunted, he brought suit against the Company to obtain a list of its stockholders, but before this suit was decided a compromise was effected whereby the Company agreed to mail, at Cabot's expense, a digest of his report to fifteen thousand stockholders, with a request for an expression of their attitude toward the question. Of the replies received, forty-eight per cent were in favor of a reduction of working hours.

In the meantime, the executive officials had issued an order requiring the abrogation of the seven-day week, which had previously been in force in all its continuous process mills. At the annual meeting in 1911 Cabot introduced a resolution, with the acquiescence of Judge Gary, appointing a committee of prominent stockholders empowered to investigate and report on conditions of labor as described in Cabot's digest. This committee reported the following year to the effect that the twelve-hour day should be abolished and put the question up to the administrative officers of the Company. A year later the officials reported that they could not cut down the twelve-hour day unless competitors would do likewise, thus offering a challenge to intelligent stockholders in all companies to take action to effect a new balance between reasonable working hours and dividends.

Thus the issue remains, but Cabot had by no means given up the fight, as is evidenced by his creating in his will a trust fund of $50,000 "to the end that industrial abuses and hardships of industrial laborers may be known and remedied." An official of the Steel Corporation writes of him, "While I often disagreed with him as to the way he went about things, I recognized his courage, determination, and unselfishness of purpose. He was certainly a great fighter and we came to get on very well together."

His interest was keen in his fellowman and in human affairs, and he was impatient with conditions which tended to curb the emancipation of the poorer classes. As he proved a loyal classmate, so he proved a loyal citizen, a citizen actuated by high motives and intelligent judgment.

BENJAMIN CARPENTER

Born	Sept. 16, 1865, Chicago, Ill.
Parents	George Benjamin Carpenter and Elizabeth Curtis Green.
Degrees	S.B., 1888.
Married	Helen Graham Fairbank, Chicago, Ill., Sept. 18, 1893.
Children	Benjamin, Jr., Jan. 23, 1896, A.B., 1916.
	Cordelia Fairbank, April 2, 1898.
	Elizabeth Webster, Nov. 6, 1900.
	Fairbank, Feb. 17, 1902.
Address	(Office), 430 Wells Street, Chicago, Ill.

Carpenter is president of George B. Carpenter & Company, and of The Great Lakes Supply Company, and director of the Corn Exchange National Bank of Chicago, the Commonwealth Edison Company, and several other corporations. In 1914 he was elected president of the Commercial Club of Chicago. He is treasurer of the Chicago Symphony Orchestra, and a director of the United Charities of Chicago. In the early part of 1917 he was commissioned Captain in the Quartermaster Corps, and was assigned in July to the Schuylkill Arsenal, Philadelphia, in charge of inspection of cotton duck, cordage, etc. In November, he was transferred to Washington as assistant to Colonel Hirsch in charge of all purchases and manufacture of equipage, clothing and equipment in the Quartermaster's department. He was later commissioned as Major.

His son, Benjamin, Jr., saw service in the Ambulance Corps in France. His younger son is at the Morristown School.

GEORGE ALBERT CARPENTER

Born	Oct. 20, 1867, Chicago, Ill.
Parents	George Benjamin Carpenter and Elizabeth Curtis Green.
Degrees	LL.B., 1891.
Married	Harriet Isham, Chicago, Ill., May 10, 1894.
Children	Katherine Snow, April 14, 1895.
	George Benjamin, 2d, Nov. 11, 1901.
	Isham, Sept. 8, 1907.
Address	(Office), 675 Federal Building, Chicago, Ill.
	(Home), 945 North Dearborn Street, Chicago, Ill.

Carpenter wrote in 1918, as follows:

"There is very little that I can write about myself which would be of interest to the Class. I feel that any man who has not an opportunity to do something active in the war is to be pitied, and I am one of those. Too old to be accepted as a volunteer, I am obliged to sit here impotently and endeavor to exhaust the quicksands with a tin dipper. My two boys are too young to be of any service, although the older, sixteen years of age, says that he can run a munitions truck if his father and mother will let him. My daughter's husband is on the Atlantic somewhere, an ensign in the United States Navy. Five of my nephews are in the service, three of them in France. In fact every he-child in the various Carpenter families, and in the families with which they are affiliated by marriage, is in the service.

"A great many questions come up before me with reference to the war statutes; some of them interesting, most of them quite the contrary. I have announced from the bench that in the matter of the war I am not neutral, and whenever, in questions which interest the Government, a doubt arises in my mind, that doubt will be resolved in favor of the governmental action.

"I have been spending the last week in trying to persuade people to do anything but steal in the interest of the Red Cross. I think that the blind goddess will be doubly blind in my court if some man is charged with stealing and can show that he gave the money to such a good purpose.

"I am rambling on this way, not that I think '88 would be interested, but because I want to keep in the good graces of our distinguished secretary, who importunes us not to write 'nothing new' or 'just the same.'

"For the first time in my life I am discontented; I am sick at heart that I am not permitted to give myself to this war. But you and I were born at the wrong time; too late to help preserve the Union and too soon to take a real part in perpetuating civilization. To be content with making sacrifices at home, suffering personal inconvenience, is like hiring a substitute for the duration of the war. We are out thirty years. We have reached middle age. Whatever our ambitions, however well physically, we are regarded as on the shelf; we are suffering from a well defined case of Anno Domini. I suppose they are right after all. Military and naval authorities probably feel that they have trouble enough without looking after the superannuated. Yet it's hard. I feel as well as I ever did; I weigh one hundred and seventy-five pounds in the bath, and do not have to apologize for a belly. I can break ninety clay pigeons out of one hundred, and can follow the dogs in the field all day after live birds. Big medicine men here say that I am physically fit; but the answer to it all is that I am fifty years old."

Any of the members of the Class who follow the daily news are sure to learn of the vigorous and positive course which Judge Carpenter follows.

FREDERICK SIMON CATE

Born April 20, 1861, Reading, Mass.
Parents John March Cate and Phoebe Hayes.
Degrees M.D., University of Maryland, 1898.
Married Helen C. Neill, Jan. 16, 1893.
Children Margaret, Feb. 11, 1894.
Roland W., March 30, 1896.
Crawford N., Sept. 20, 1905.
Address Cor. Nadeau Avenue and Alameda Street, Los Angeles, Cal.

The Secretary is happy to add Cate to the list of "found men." He writes:

"I have been practicing medicine nineteen years, the last twelve of which have been at my present address. My oldest boy is in the navy."

Percy Chase

Born May 15, 1865, Lynn, Mass.
Died April 20, 1914, Boston, Mass.
Parents Philip A. Chase and Alice B. Peirce.
Married Marion Crowell Monks, Brookline, Mass., April 14, 1896.

The Class reports are very meager as to Chase's life. They record only with great brevity his athletic ability while in college, and his business career in later life. This very brevity is representative of his character. He was quiet, reserved, undemonstrative, but all the time expressing very great friendliness to all who knew him. His interest in all his classmates and their lives was very keen.

He had always appeared to be in the best of health, and his sudden sickness and death was a great shock to all his friends. At a meeting of the Class held on Comencement Day, 1914, the following resolutions were passed:

"Whereas, we record with deepest regret the death in Boston on April 20, 1914, of our classmate Percy Chase.

"Resolved: That the Class wish to express their sorrow in the loss of one whose strong, loyal, genial and lovable character rendered him particularly dear to all who knew him."

The Secretary is happy to take this opportunity to express the deep appreciation of the Class for Mrs. Chase's thoughtfulness on several occasions of sending flowers on Commencement Day to be placed on the '88 gate in remembrance of her husband, and as an evidence of his loyalty to the college and his class.

HENRY DURANT CHEEVER

Born	Jan. 8, 1867, New York, N. Y.

Cheever reports: "Since last report I have become President of the Okonite Company, and have devoted all my time to increasing the efficiency of this company. My time is divided almost equally between manufacturing problems and the general administration, such as finances, sales, etc. The results have been gratifying; the production has been more than doubled, and the percentage of selling cost and over head materially decreased.

"Since the United States entered the war, we have put our entire organization at the disposal of the Government, and practically our whole factory capacity is now busy on strictly war orders, all of which we have accepted at very close prices—much below our usual commercial prices—therefore, during the war our profits will be small, and both stockholders and yours truly will suffer accordingly—but we will have the satisfaction of feeling that we are 'doing our bit.'

"I am also glad to report that this company has secured the services of our Classmate, Charles H. Baldwin, who has been with us since January, 1917.

"Please note that we have moved to the 'finest building on the finest corner of the finest city in the world,' which is 501 Fifth Avenue, corner of 42nd Street."

In 1917 he became sales manager of the Peerless Insulated Wire and Cable Company of New York, and in April, 1918, he went back to the Page Company, and is now at their New York office, 30 Church Street. Besides his home at Elizabeth, N. J., he claims Rutland, Vermont, as a place of residence. In November of 1917 he became a member of the Home Guard of Elizabeth, and has seen active service to the extent that he was called out to guard the plants of the Standard Aero Corporation at Plainfield and Elizabeth, N. J. This included duty on one night at a temperature of eight degrees below zero.

His son, Frederic Percival, Jr., was a first lieutenant in the Aviation Corps. He was stationed at Fort Worth, Texas. On July 4, 1918, he was detailed for exhibition flights at Fort Dick. In the course of these his machine got out of control and crashed, and he was so seriously injured that he died before reaching the hospital. He had the reputation of being a very skillful and daring pilot.

Roger Conant Clement was a first lieutenant of Infantry in the 76th Division.

Cogswell was commissioned captain in the Medical Reserve Corps on December 7, 1917. Before that time he had done a great deal of work in the examination of candidates for training camps, and served as surgeon of the Harvard R.O.T.C. camp in July, 1917. In March of 1918 he was ordered to active duty at Camp Greenleaf, Chickamauga Park, Georgia. He was later made surgeon in charge of a replacement draft, and in performance of that duty, went across, and saw much hard marching and performed a lot of stupid routine work. On return to the United States in February, 1919, he was mustered out.

His son, George Russell, in June, 1916, volunteered for the American Ambulance Field Service in France, and served in Alsace, at Verdun, in Lorraine, and before St. Mihiel. He was finally made Commandant of his section. He and the section received two citations, a personal felicitation from General Girard, and a croix de guerre. On his return to the United States he was commissioned a first lieutenant of Infantry and subsequently captain.

At a meeting of the Class held on Commencement Day, 1914, at Cambridge, the following memorial was passed:

"Cotting left college before graduation and shortly afterwards entered his father's office where he occupied himself with the care and management of property. On account of ill health he was obliged to give up active business, and travelled extensively, making a trip around the world, and living for a time in California. On his return to the east his health gradually failed and he died in Boston on the twenty-second of August, 1913, soon after our Twenty-fifth Anniversary.

"Cotting was always of a generous and charitable disposition, and although absent a great deal from Boston was always interested in his class and Harvard College, and gave generously when called upon."

Arts and Sciences. My classmates may be interested to know that so far fifty-five of their sons have been in Harvard. Of these nearly all have graduated or expect to graduate except those who went into military or naval service without completing the requirements for their degrees."

Cram had some very difficult work to do when the Students Army Training Corps was formed in the fall of 1918, as a large part of the administrative detail fell on him.

Jane Elizabeth, July 12, 1907.
Address (Office), Pierce Building, Copley Square, Boston, Mass.
(Home), Wellesley Hills, Mass.

Curtis wrote: "I have practically nothing of interest to say about myself for the last five years. In our time one lives in the lives of one's children. I do certain work on the Committee of Public Safety in Wellesley, and look after the hospital needs of our sick poor. Also I have served for two years as secretary of the Wellesley Advisory Committee. Such matters are of extremely minor interest, if of any interest at all. I have established the American Branch of the Medical Society of London. With this exception my business life continues as before. Instead of driving a motor car, I drive oxen, and when I ride home from the station, I take a horse-drawn carriage. I am sure that such taste is not the sign of advancing age, for this has always been my preference. I continue to carry on a large place at Blue Hill in Maine, my personal interest there being chiefly in forestry, which I have carried on for many years under the advice and direction of the Forestry Department of the Government. It is of great interest to see the increase in the width of the annual ring growth of spruce and pine by judicious treatment of the forest. I mention these things just to show you how unimportant my life is."

Curtis's oldest son, Gordon, was a first lieutenant in the 302nd Field Artillery, and was instructor of motorized artillery at Camp Devens. His younger son, Robert, was an ensign, and in command of a U-boat chaser.

In the course of his business Curtis has continued his frequent trips to Europe. On one of the trips he had the novel experience of being arrested on the allegation that he had been signalling at night to Zeppelins.

After retiring from this he became an officer of the Dana Hardware Company, which succeeded his father's business. Dana's many kindly qualities were greatly appreciated by those who were fortunate to know him really well.

As yet I have not gone abroad, but have tried as best I could to minister to the needs of that portion of our fellow citizens who are in danger of being more and more forgotten and neglected, the civilian population at home. How long this will last I cannot say, and for the next Report I may have a more interesting story."

CHANDLER DAVIS

Born July 6, 1866, San Francisco, Cal.
Parents George Henry Davis and Clara Jane Gherardi.
Degrees C.E. as well as A.B., 1888.
Address (Office), 1 West 54th Street, New York, N. Y.

Davis continued the practice of his profession until January, 1917. He made several trips to the West Indies and Central America as consulting engineer, and spent considerable time in Columbia, Costa Rica, and on the Isthmus. In January, 1917, he was commissioned captain in the Engineers Reserve Corps, and in May was ordered to the training camp at Fort Oglethorpe, Chickamauga, Georgia. He was Commanding Officer of the Casual Company, 1st U. S. Engineers, of colored stevedores, of the Band of the Corps of Engineers, of the Headquarters Company, 6th U. S. Engineers, and Topographical Officer of the same regiment.

In April, 1918, he wrote: "Ben Carpenter and myself, or 100% of our Lawrence Scientific School Class, are in the United States Service. Of this class 50% anyway are in France, and have been on the front line trenches. In fact we have just come out after an eight days' experience at the front.

"We have received our baptismal purple, and have shown our allies that even without preliminary training the American is to be counted on. I am very proud of the men in my company, the Headquarters Detachment. They behaved splendidly, and the United States can be proud of the troops it is sending to put an end to the war. If you could see the desolation in France, the wanton destruction of property by the Boches, private as well as public, you would take the pacifists by the scruff of the neck and throttle them. They make me sick anyway."

The detachment which Davis commanded in March, 1918, was among the forces put into the front line trenches by General Carey of the English Army to help check the advance of the Germans. Headquarters Company and Companies B and D of the 6th Engineers were in this engagement. During the course of this fight, as Davis has expressed it, he tried to stop a six-inch shell with his helmet, but it didn't work. What really happened was, that he was buried under a mass of earth by a shell, and this must have produced some sort of shell-shock, as a result of which, about three weeks after the fight, he was ordered to a base hospital. For his conduct in this action he was awarded the Military Cross under orders of General Rawlinson, commanding the 4th British Army. The order reads as follows:

"Awarded the Military Cross for gallantry and devotion to duty in action. His lieutenant being killed, Captain Davis, although wounded, insisted on remaining with his command during heavy bombardment until his Company was relieved."

Dexter writes: "We who are politely described as being in the prime of life have our eyes fixed perforce on the next generation, who are fast coming up to supplant us, but I take it that an interesting account of my son's activities would not serve your turn.

"I am still engaged in Boston practicing what some people call law, but which I should not have the temerity to describe by any such high title. Looking after other people's property would be a more accurate description, with occasional practice of certain branches of the law. The war finds me unfit for any of its physical activities, so I continue to do very much the same things as in the past, with the additional job of drawing wills for the young soldiers who pass through this office on their way to France."

Dexter served as an assistant legal advisor in the draft, and the Secretary knows that he spent three hours one evening preparing a questionnaire for a Lithuanian, who, it subsequently appeared, had already been sent to camp and rejected on the ground of insanity.

Edson writes: "I spent the summer of 1913 in London studying heart diseases under James Mackenzie. In 1914 I served as president of the Medical Society of the City and County of Denver. At the outbreak of the war I was greatly disappointed at being unable to pass the physical requirements for a commission in the Medical Reserve Corps. In July, 1917, I was appointed a member of District Board, No. 2, for the state of Colorado for the draft. The work of this board took a great deal of my time. It meant long hours, great responsibility, but great interest. The response of the northern half of Colorado was quick, loyal, and general. We established a record for speed, and were the first District Board to complete our work. Much of this was due to the exceptional quality of the other members, all being men of the utmost devotion and highest ideals of the duties of citizenship. As a result we never had a moment's friction or a divided vote. I was also the chairman of the Committee on Physicians of the State Council of Defense, organizing the work for publicity and combatting German propaganda. In addition the routine duties of regular practice have filled all of my time."

His work is the conducting of the Department of Applied Ornithology which attempts to popularize the attracting and practical increase of wild birds, including the propagation of game-birds and wild water-fowl by the public. In connection with this work he published in 1915 the first Manual of practical detail on this subject in America, "The Propagation of Wild Birds," and also published bulletins and magazine articles. He wrote:

"In connection with this work I have been photographing motion pictures of wild bird life for the propaganda of our association. In 1915 I made cruises along the coasts of Florida and Louisiana, part of the time in company with our esteemed alumnus, Theodore Roosevelt. He appears in various scenes of the pictures. On that trip I took about three miles of film! We have now made up seven reels for lecture and publicity purposes."

Job is in charge of the Experiment Station of Applied Ornithology at Amston, Connecticut, ten miles west of Willimantic. This station is on a large tract of land embracing three or four square miles, which includes a lake over a mile long, and is the property of Charles M. Ams of New York. In summer he stays there carrying out the work of propagation of several species of quail, of pheasants, wild doves, and fifteen species of water-fowl, and the general attracting of birds. "Audubon House" serves as headquarters, and the "Amston Inn" receives visitors and students, thus making the place a summer school of ornithology and a rendezvous for bird-lovers. Job extends an invitation to members of the Class to visit the place and see what is being done.

His son, George C., was foreman of two plants of the Butterworth-Judson Company of Newark, N. J., producing chemicals used in high explosives.

FRANCIS DEMETRIUS KALOPOTHAKES

Born Aug. 20, 1867, Athens, Greece.
Parents Demetrius Kalopothakes and Martha Hooper Blackler.
Degrees Ph.D., Berlin, 1893.
Address Arch of Hadrian, Athens, Greece.

After a long period of silence and absence the members of the Class have had the great pleasure of seeing Kalopothakes in the winter of 1918-19, during which time he came to this country, and attended dinners held in New York and Boston. At both of these dinners he spoke with great interest to those who heard him. At the Boston dinner he was able to make some very illuminating statements as to the conditions in Greece, with which he was very familiar. He traveled from Athens to Paris on his way here with Premier Venizelos. He wrote in January, 1919, of himself, as follows:

"I believe I have already reported up to the completion of my studies in Germany in 1893. Returning in that year to Athens, I took up journalism, and have since belonged to that much-abused profession, with the exception of a few years, in which I was foolish enough to go into business, that turned out a ghastly failure. It is now some ten years since I returned to the old trade, a sadder and a wiser man, and I have been the Athens correspondent of the Morning Post of London. Also since 1913 I have been on the permanent staff of the American Legation at Athens, doing a secretary's job, though unable to have that title, as I am not an American citizen. My connection with the Legation was a very fortunate circumstance for me in 1916, for, having made myself obnoxious to King Constantine's pro-German propaganda, I was 'wanted' by his merry men during the man-hunting of the Venizelists, and only escaped imprisonment and maltreatment by staying within the Legation premises for forty-five days! Fortunately all is now quiet in Greece, and Venizelos is back in power. Since then my life has been the usual routine, except for a delightful visit to the United States this month, including a Class dinner in Boston, where I was delighted to see so many of my old classmates again, after an interval of thirty years and seven months."

Kennard reports that there is little of general interest except that on Nov. 19, 1915 he was fifty years old, and that on the previous afternoon he had pulled down the top of his office desk for the last time exactly as he had always hoped to be able to do. He wrote:

"I did not retire. That sounds too dignified and opulent. I merely quit the active practice of the profession in which I had worked pretty hard for a good many years, in the hope that I might be able to spend the rest of my life riding the various hobbies in which I had always been interested."

He has published a popular war song "Three Cheers for Your Uncle Sam," 10,000 copies having been sold in three days, which is some evidence of popularity. Another of his songs "We Stand" was also published during the war, and has found its way into precincts which would be tightly closed to songs about Uncle Sam. He wrote:

"As soon as it becomes clear whether or not the world is a fit place to live in, I expect to be able to report as to whether or not I am happy. As to prosperity, a college professor doesn't expect much, and therefore doesn't regard his happiness as dependent on that. If he owns no automobiles he is generally acquainted with several kindly people who do. Hence, in times of peace, when health is good, and an occasional student gets A, the world looks bright.''

In 1916 he was made a member of the General Medical Board of the Council of National Defense. He has been a member of the Massachusetts State Branch of that board, and for a time was its secretary. On April 11, 1917, he received a commission as major in the Medical Reserve Corps, and during the summer was a member of the examining board of the Reserve Corps in Boston. In November he was appointed Medical Aid to the Governor of Massachusetts, acting as advisor and organizer of the Medical Advisory Boards appointed to examine the men included in the second draft. He also acted as instructor to three successive classes of military surgeons in the treatment of fractures and traumatic surgery at the Boston City Hospital from November, 1917 to January, 1918. On January 19, 1918, he was ordered to Camp Wheeler, Macon, Georgia, as director of the Surgical Service. This camp was occupied by the National Guard of Florida, Georgia, and Alabama. There was a great deal of sickness there, and the service was one of the busiest of any of the camps. After the armistice, while still stationed in the South, his eye was injured by being struck by a tennis ball. Very fortunately the injury has not proved serious, although it gave him a great deal of trouble for a time.

His son, Charles C., was stroke of the Henley crew which won the Henley Regatta in 1914, and of the varsity crews of 1915 and 1916. The latter had the honor of lowering the

During recent years he has been connected with the United States Department of Labor, and acted as conciliator in numerous labor disputes. He was the temporary secretary of the industrial conference held in Washington in October, 1919. He wrote:

"At your earnest request, I will break the 'reticence' to which you refer, and which I have maintained for thirty years, so far as Class Reports go, to ask a single question. I am not interested in the petty, or even the important, distinctions which members of the Class have 'achieved.' What I would like to know is, what benefit the Class has been to any member, what benefit any member has been to the Class, or what benefit has accrued in any respect, reciprocally or otherwise, from this so-called 'Class Association?'

"You will notice that my interrogatory does not touch at all on the much larger consideration, i. e., of what benefit has this class been to progress and to civilization.

Frederick Howard Means

Born Aug. 14, 1865, Dorchester, Mass.
Died Sept. 10, 1919, Brookline, Mass.
Parents James Howard Means and Charlotte Abigail Johnson.
Degrees B.D., Yale, 1891.
Married Helen Chandler Coit, Winchester, Mass., May 25, 1893; died Dec. 25, 1912.
Children Paul Howard, Nov. 1 1894, A.B., 1917.
Gardiner Coit, June 8, 1896, (1914-17), Class of 1918.
Winthrop Johnson, July 26, 1899, Class of 1921.

Means graduated from the Roxbury Latin School in 1884, Balch, Barry, Bolster, Butler, Churchill, Cram, and Woodman being classmates. In college he was quiet, reserved, and scholarly but had a strong hold on those who got to know and understand him. He enjoyed the firm friendship of a few rather than a large acquaintance among his fellows. Upon his graduation from the Yale Divinity School and some "candidating," he accepted in 1893 a pastorate at the Windham, Connecticut, Congregational Church. The parish consisted of two villages—one a farming community and the other a manufacturing place, and Means as the one resident minister led a busy life throughout the ten years he remained there. For the next six years he lived at Winchester, Massachusetts, supplying pulpits in various places, and active in other forms of church work. In 1909 he was called to the pastorate of the Congregational Church at Madison, Maine, and held this post until 1917. At this time he became secretary of the Missionary Education Movement and later one of the staff of the American Board of Foreign Missions with offices at the Congregational House in Boston.

Paul, his oldest son, graduated at the Morristown School, then under the management of Browne, Butler, and Woodman. He is now a student at the Harvard Medical School.

His second son, Gardiner, is in Turkey doing relief work. During the war he was a second lieutenant of Aviation.

His third son, Winthrop, is in his junior year at Harvard.

The relationship of these boys to their father was unusually delightful. They seemed to "gravitate" to him with a feeling of complete understanding and sympathy.

Means lived a quiet simple life devoted to the service of his fellowmen. He called out great love and devotion from everybody, and especially from boys on account of his activities as a naturalist and his interest in Boy Scouts. He was a good citizen and stood for the simple, serviceable, and real things of life. He was also a firm friend and a first rate fellow.

The ministers from the Congregational churches of Greater Boston in resolutions concerning Means stated:

"We are sure that the life of Frederick Howard Means has given new proof of Christian faith, and we are glad of the testimony of his life to the value of unselfish service for the Church and the Kingdom of Righteousness."

Parents William Pitt Fessenden Meserve and Mary E. B. Smith.
Married Helen Struve MacCulsky, London, England, Sept. 12, 1902.

Meserve has continued a career which to most of the Class must appear highly adventuresome. He was in England when the war broke out, and remained there until 1915. He then went to Paris for six months, and in August went to Russia to represent the National City Bank of New York. He was at Petrograd for two years and a half, and negotiated the American loans made to the Russian Government of the "old regime." He was in the thick of three revolutions in Petrograd and in Moscow, and only returned to America via Siberia in January of 1918. He is now a vice-president of the National City Bank of New York, in charge of its office in Paris.

Miles wrote:

"I received an unexpected call to the Dwight Place Congregational Church in New Haven, when I came on from California for the Twenty-fifth Anniversary of the Class of '88. I accepted the call and began the new work the first of November of that year. While missing some things and many friends in California, I am glad to be again in New England and within reach of the large circle of old time friends. My work in New Haven has been uneventful but happy. I have done some service at Camp Devens, and on the first of April sailed for France to do Y. M. C. A. work in connection with the American Expeditionary Forces. My church granted me six months leave of absence, and I have gone, hoping to be back October 1, but wondering whether I shall be able to pull out of army work at that time. The soldiers at Camp Devens proved so responsive, and work with them was so uncommonly interesting that I have gone to France with enthusiasm. I hope to meet there some doctors of '88."

Miles saw some very active work in France and got very close to the front line during the battles of July, 1918, north of the Marne.

Rupert Norton

Born July 21, 1867, Ashfield, Mass.
Died June 19, 1914, Baltimore, Md.
Parents Charles Eliot Norton and Susan Sedgwick.
Degrees M.D., 1893.
Married Cecelia Hendrikson, Baltimore, Md., June, 1913.

The last word received from Norton was under date of April 20, 1914, and was a very kindly and appreciative letter sent to the Secretary upon receipt of the last Class Report. Norton was then assistant superintendent of the Johns Hopkins Hospital. His death was caused by a severe attack of typhoid fever. He had been attacked twenty years ago, and had considered that this helped to make him immune, and had never taken the typhoid inoculation.

Memorials of Norton were printed in The Modern Hospital for August, 1914, written by Henry M. Hurd, and in The Johns Hopkins Hospital Bulletin for August, 1914, written by William S. Thayer. The Secretary quotes from these articles. Dr. Hurd writes:

"Careful, faithful, thorough in his work, rather diffident in manner, he was not quick in making acquaintances; but before he left the hospital he was dearly loved by all his associates. For behind the shy, diffident, rather abrupt manner, were hidden most lovable and charming qualities of mind and heart; a keen perception; a nice sense of humor; a most companionable, lovable, loyal nature—kindly and generous, charitable to a fault, intolerant only of that which seemed to him soft, unmanly or indirect.

"In April, 1895, he left the hospital and began the practice of medicine in Washington—practice which was not rapid in coming to him; for he was too shy, too retiring, too reserved, and his peculiar reticence and even dryness of manner were too often interpreted as coldness and lack of interest. But those patients who came to know him, and the colleagues who broke through the shell of dryness and reserve, found one of the warmest, most generous and kindly hearts that ever beat. No one who knew Norton failed to love him. His patience, his conscientiousness, his literary ability, his unfailing good taste, were relied upon by all. . . . . And during this time he has grown into our hearts as few men could.

"Norton was not widely known, and he published little; but he did good work, and he leaves many friends to whose lives he has added something uplifting and enduring. Only now that he has gone, do we who knew him begin to realize how large were his generosity and his charity, and how deep had been his influence upon us.

"When we look upon his career, we shall remember his simplicity, his modesty, his upright, uncompromising honesty of purpose and word and practice, his delicate charm of mind, his varied attainments and interests and abilities, his faithful work in many capacities; but above all we shall remember the rare beauty of his friendship."

Professor Thayer writes:

"He possessed a well-trained mind and a discriminating, critical faculty, and thought lightly of the labor of examining manuscripts and the drudgery of constant proof reading, if by this labor he could raise the standard of medical publications and increase their influence on medical education. None but those who have toiled in a similar capacity can appreciate the irksome character of his occupation thus carried on faithfully in the spare moments snatched from absorbing administrative duties.

"He was the soul of honor, honesty, and uprightness, with high ideals of personal service. He was warmly interested in the social service of the hospital, and gave much thought and time to it. He was kind to the poor and generous to those who needed aid or charitable consideration. He was a loyal and devoted friend, and, although by nature modest and reserved, the honor and reputation of a friend was as cherished as his own."

He saw service in the Spanish War in the pathological department of one of the southern hospitals.

In September, 1915, O'Callaghan was appointed rector of the Apostolic Mission House at the Catholic University in Washington and editor of The Missionary. The Apostolic Mission House is a graduate seminary for the training of missionary priests. The Missionary is the official organ of the Catholic Missionary Union; it is second in point of circulation among the Catholic religious magazines of the United States, having over one hundred thousand subscribers. He gives a course in Christian Apologetics at the Mission House. Small opportunity is left for sociological and philanthropic work such as filled so much of the twelve years he spent at Chicago. He represented the Catholic Total Abstinence Union in the United Committee on War Temperance Activities in the Army and Navy. He is a member of the Monday Night Club.

Nathan Oppenheim

Born Oct. 17, 1865, Albany, N. Y.
Died April 5, 1916, New York, N. Y.
Parents Gerson Oppenheim and Theresa Stein.
Degrees M.D., Columbia, 1891.
Married Bertha A. Elsberg, New York, N. Y., June 15, 1897.

Oppenheim studied his profession abroad and then at Columbia where he took his degree. He was eminently successful in private practice and became a specialist on the diseases of children, and served extensively on the staffs of various hospitals for children in New York City. He also published several books on his special subject. He was a member of numerous medical associations.

On the side of recreation he ran a large farm principally devoted to live-stock at Ferrisburg, Vermont, and apparently took as much satisfaction in making this recreation a profitable business as he did in his strictly professional work.

He was not very well known in college, and in the early years after graduation did not show very much interest in Class affairs. Of late years he had missed very few opportunities of meeting his classmates, and had shown in the pleasantest possible way, without any forth-putting, his great ability, friendliness and interest in his fellows.

His son, Ed, was a second lieutenant of Infantry. John went into training for army aviation, but was unable to continue for physical reasons. Robert was a second lieutenant and trained as an aerial observer. Perkins was too young for service. He was employed by the Cumberland Valley National Bank at Nashville, Tenn.

Children Herman Riddle, May 3, 1892, A.B., 1913.
Address 2303 First Avenue, Spokane, Washington.

Page wrote:

"In October, 1914, I was elected Bishop of Spokane, and was consecrated January 28, 1915, arriving here early in February. My field of work comprises the whole of Washington lying east of the Cascade Mountains. It is a most beautiful and interesting country here, and I hope that if any of my classmates are traveling this way they will surely let me know. Spokane itself is a modern and active city of over 100,000 people and is the metropolis of the so-called Inland Empire. The term 'Missionary Bishop' means that my work is a work of beginnings and is yet so weak that it has to be supported largely from outside sources. This explains why I am obliged to go east frequently to get money for my work. This means, however, that I have opportunities of seeing old friends, including many members of the Class of 1888."

His son was a chaplain in the army, and saw service in France.

In 1919, on the death of the Bishop of Idaho, Page undertook his work temporarily. This work added the slight area of 85,000 square miles which he had to cover.

Dixon, May 16, 1906.
Address 64 Wall Street, New York, N. Y.

Peale disclaims the statement made in the last report that he was active in politics. His home town, Summit, N. J., is, he wrote, "one of the fortunate places whose municipal affairs are conducted without regard to politics. My political activity in recent years has been confined to quarreling with those self-confessed patriots who were clamorous for war until the shoe began to pinch, but now can see nothing good in anything under the sun, at least in Washington." Peale continues to be a member of the Board of Education at Summit.

His son, Franklin V., was a member of the Class of 1918 for three years, and was in service at Camp Dix. His son, Rodgers, was a second lieutenant of Field Artillery.

Children Thomas Ruston, Dec. 20, 1894; A.B., 1916.
Address (Office), Boston Latin School, Boston, Mass.
(Home), 6 Chauncy Street, Cambridge, Mass.

Pennypacker continues as head master of the Boston Latin School. In the spring of 1918 he was appointed a member of the Graduate Committee on Athletics.

His son graduated at the Ensign School at Newport, Rhode Island, on April 30, 1918, receiving his commission as ensign.

Pennypacker wrote so interestingly of some of the problems of his profession, that the Secretary quotes in full:

"I had supposed that the function of a school was to implant in a boy reverence for truth and energetic industry, and a respect for sound scholarship and the worth of honest labor. I believed that when a school taught standards both of duty and honor as well as of faithful toil, it was reaching to its highest office.

"These notions are being challenged nowadays both inside and outside of the profession. Difficult, exacting, or uncongenial tasks are out of place in the modern school, and only those studies which are immediately and obviously useful should be pursued therein. The mark is no longer a record of historical fact—of definite achievement by the boy, but is merely an 'inspirational' untruth designed for the comfort of all concerned. Failure involves wear and tear, and this mendacity obviates friction and 'passes the buck' to the college. Some colleges pass it on to the employer and the public. I rejoice that Harvard does not.

"But whether, because of the modern influences or in spite of them, the boy himself has made great strides. The old wall of ice between master and boy has melted. Frank, responsive, even cordial good-will is surely coming to replace the old secretiveness and sense of opposition. School public opinion is tremendously changed from that of a generation ago. Cheating in school work is the last stronghold and that is giving ground. Comradeship, co-operation, and unity of purpose are crowding out the cold respect and restraint of other years. Schoolboy pranks persist of course—they always will I hope—but styles change. For instance, it is no longer good form to be seen drunk in the college yard.

"Our old school, supported by taxation and paid for by the public, has adhered to its ancient ideals of work and industry. It is supposed that was what parents and public desired. It has tried to give every boy careful, accurate, and sympathetic teaching, and then to tell the truth as to his attainments. We have now about 20% failing of promotion each year. Some, whose judgment I respect, denote this intellectual murder. We have no envy of the felon's stripes —nor do we seek the martyr's crown. Let the public—our employers—state exactly what service they wish, and that we shall give to our utmost limit."

to his farm at South Dartmouth, Massachusetts, and says that "he works hard, keeps well and sleeps."

Three of his sons saw service in the war. Henry M., Jr., was for six months in the volunteer ambulance service, and was commissioned a second lieutenant in the Quartermaster Corps. Morgan H. was a gunner with the 11th Canadian Heavy Siege Battery. George Hale, Nov. 20, 1896, (1914-18), Class of 1918.
Address (Office), 412 Barristers Hall, Boston, Mass.

I continue the practice of law in Boston, associated with Bailey, Dickinson, and Johnson.

In April, 1914, I had the misfortune to get rather seriously laid up, and was obliged to keep away from business for about five months. For the last two winters I have lived in Cambridge, and have had the curious experience of seeing the familiar college surroundings filled with four thousand sailors of the Radio School, hundreds of members of the Naval Ensign School, and in 1918 with almost all of the undergraduate members of the college in military uniform, as members of the S. A. T. C. The change this year, 1919, to the customary appearance has been very swift and very interesting.

The war affected me as it has so many of the other members of the Class. I was not too proud to fight, but the Government said that I was too old to fight. Consequently my activities were limited to the Red Cross, and to work under the Selective Service Law. Nominally I was treasurer of the Newton Chapter of the Red Cross, but actually my duties were largely in the line of smoothing the feelings of much-excited, but very well-meaning, ladies who were much disturbed by conflicting orders as to the number of stitches to be knitted into regulation socks. Under the Selective Service Law I had two jobs: one as Government Appeal Agent for Newton, and the other as a member of the Permanent Legal Advisory Board for that city. This work took a great deal of time in 1917 and 1918, but it was exceedingly interesting. The job of Appeal Agent, as it worked with me, made me the final hope of every registrant to whom deferred classification had been refused. Every day I had interviews with numbers of these men; interviews which revealed many curious phases of human nature, and which sometimes roused my sympathies very strongly.

I continue to be interested in a number of other local institutions in Newton, but have resigned my work as treasurer of the Newton Hospital after fourteen years of service.

My son enlisted in the Naval Reserve in March of 1917, but was not called into active service until June of 1918.

He was admitted to the Aviation School at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology. On leaving there he was detailed to study aerography at the observatory on the Milton Blue Hills, and in October received his commission as ensign. He had orders to sail on November 12, 1918, which naturally were cancelled.

Rand continued his practice in New York until December 11, 1917, when he was commissioned major in the Judge Advocate's Department. For a time he was on duty on Major General Crowder's staff at Washington. From there he went to France where he was attached to General Headquarters, and subsequently on October 14, 1918, he was promoted to lieutenant-colonel, and on April 22, 1919, to colonel. He was discharged May 1, 1919. On May 24, 1919, he was the guest of honor at a dinner at the Knickerbocker Club, New York City, which many of the members of the Class attended. He has now returned to the practice of law as a member of the firm of Jerome, Rand, and Kresel, at the address given above. It is evidence of the reputation which Rand made in military work that to him was given the task of reviewing the proceedings in cases where sentences of death had been imposed.

His son, Robert C., volunteered for the navy when war was declared. He saw service on the U.S.S. Harvard, which did patrol and convoy duty off the coast of France. His son, William, Jr., also volunteered in the navy on the declaration of war, and served on a patrol boat near New York until October, 1917, when he went to Annapolis for a three months' course. He received his commission as ensign, and was assigned to a destroyer.

Shepard writes: "I am still continuing in the retail coal business, but a large part of my time is spent in writing deeds and conveyances and in Probate practice, the writing of wills and the settling of estates. I was appointed pension claim agent by the Department of the Interior, upon the recommendation of the late Chief Justice Pike of the New Hampshire Court, but my pension work has been done as before, in privately aiding applicants to establish their claims. Some Police Court work and other duties of Justice and Notary have filled up the measure of my time. Since the war began I have been adding a little to the town's supply of food at our farm located two miles from our home. Were it not for age and other disqualifications I would gladly enlist and try to follow in the footsteps of my father, an officer in the Civil War."

I am also actively engaged in managing three vessels, one of which is a bark of fourteen hundred tons, in which I take considerable interest. This vessel is now on a voyage from Calcutta, India, to Boston with a cargo of jute. There seems to be further eastern business promising. Certainly the days of the old clipper ships are being revived. Sailing vessels are now going to all parts of the world, probably only because all the steamers are taken up in the war zone."

Shepard is vice-president of the Blanchard Machine Company.

He was a member of the Class team in the fall of 1885.

Ezra Ripley Thayer

Born	Feb. 21, 1866, Milton, Mass.
Died	Sept. 14, 1915, Boston, Mass.

In Thayer's death the Class has again been hard hit by the loss of one of its most able, brilliant, and lovable members. In the inevitable passage of time our ranks must dwindle, but the living members of 1888 can truly say that death has chosen the fairest marks among our number.

Thayer's father, James Bradley Thayer, was for nearly thirty years a professor in the Harvard Law School, a man of rare scholarship, and, as members of the Class who attended the Law School know, one of the most respected and best loved teachers the School has ever had. Thayer's mother was a granddaughter of the Reverend Ezra Ripley, of the Old Manse in Concord, Massachusetts, and descended from William Bradford, the early colonial governor. She was a highly talented woman of the finest New England type. Ezra was their second son and combined many of the best qualities of both parents. He was educated in the public schools of Cambridge, had a year with a private tutor in Athens, and then completed his preparation in Hopkinson's School. After graduation from the Law School he served for a year as secretary to Mr. Justice Gray of the United States Supreme Court, and then began practice in Boston with the firm of Warren and Brandeis. In 1896 he became a member of this firm and continued until 1900 when he became a partner in the firm of Storey, Thorndike, Palmer (1888), and Thayer. In 1910 he was appointed Dean of the Harvard Law School as successor to the late James Barr Ames. He gave up his practice and devoted himself exclusively to teaching and the administrative work of the School. In 1913 he was, against his express wish, nominated by Governor Foss as Justice of the Massachusetts Supreme Judicial Court. This nomination placed Thayer in a most embarrassing position. He expressed, however, so frankly and clearly what he believed to be his duty in retaining his office at the Law School that the esteem of his friends, both laymen and members of the bar, was increased. A justiceship of the Supreme Judicial Court of Massachusetts is the highest position to which a lawyer in Massachusetts can hope to rise, and is second only, in general estimation, to a justiceship of the Supreme Court of the United States. A refusal to accept such a position by a man of Thayer's training and inheritance must have been a matter of deep regret, but he truly felt that the path of duty lay in the work at the Law School and in the direction of its students, who were to form so important a part of the bar throughout the country.

In practice at the bar Thayer adhered to the very highest standards and the best traditions. Any conduct savoring of pettifogging or chicane was abhorrent to him, and he could not tolerate such conduct in others. His keen sense of honor would brook nothing questionable. He served for a number of years on the grievance committee of the Boston Bar Association, and was a member and the secretary of the committee appointed by the American Bar Association to frame a code of ethics. This code has been adopted substantially unchanged by the bar associations of more than half of the states in the Union.

Thayer had perhaps a finer legal mind than any man in his generation. Some might excel him in profound learning as to special subjects, some in subtlety of thought, and some in forensic oratory. But none excelled him in the combination of perception, concentration, power of analysis, ability to grasp essential facts, understanding of fundamental principles, openness of mind, united with a capacity to apply all his powers and all his knowledge to the subject before him.

He was the first scholar in our Class, but he was far from being a "grind." He had time and inclination for sports, for social affairs, and for friendly meeting with his classmates, and these qualities he carried with him into active life. He was a fluent and always interesting talker, but he was able to listen. His buoyancy of spirit and unusually keen sense of humor rendered him always a delightful companion. He responded immediately and fully to any call for sympathy. Although capable of biting sarcasm he seldom, if ever, employed this weapon. He was loyal to the core, and incapable of a mean or dishonorable act. He was quick to discern and scorn any sham, but tolerant of inexperience and honest lack of capacity. He was just and intellectually honest. He did not allow his prejudices to govern him, or adhere to an opinion once formed if it did not stand the test of analysis.

We shall always remember Thayer's vigorous and beautiful speech at the Alumni meeting in 1913 when he responded for the Class,—a speech so sound, so inspiring, and so earnest as to stir the thoughts and emotions of all his audience. And those who were so fortunate as to attend the Class dinner in February of 1915, over which he presided, were charmed by the grace, the playful humor, and genial good-fellowship he brought to this office.

To whatever he turned his active and disciplined mind he added something of real value and of charm. No member of our Class had such a remarkable combination of qualities, no member had more of solid performance to show, and none had the promise of greater use to his chosen profession and to the community. We have lost his personal presence. We shall ever have his fragrant memory.

The late Major Henry L. Higginson published in the Boston Evening Transcript of September 20, 1915, the following brief appreciation, which well expresses what Thayer's life and character meant to a senior who had known him well:

"Others will tell us of Ezra Thayer's gifts and of his service at the bar and at the Law School. To a layman we may be allowed to speak of his great, simple charm, springing from a sweet, true nature. Born of noble New England forbears, living with a distinguished class of Harvard University, and lately with the earnest able teachers of the Law School, he gave to his task all his powers and lifetime, intent only on his task. Entering a room, he brought sunshine with him, and shed it on his friends. If he asked for a service he did it with such simple grace that it seemed as if he were bestowing a favor. It was a pleasure to work or to counsel with him, for his only aim was to do the task in the best way, and, doubting his own powers, he deferred to others. Simple, gentle, winning, reasonable, valuing other men highly, he erred only in valuing himself too low. It is delightful to see such a true gentleman in the highest and fullest sense of the word, and in the same measure it is grievous to lose him. He has left behind him a host of friends among his classmates, students and fellow-workers, and he has left a happy memory.

If he were to leave us too soon can we ask more?

H. L. H."

For much of the material used in this article the Secretary is indebted to the Harvard Law Review, the issue for November, 1915. The account appearing in this number was republished by the Harvard Law Review in a memorial pamphlet with several of his more recent addresses on legal subjects. This publication was incidental to the presentation to the Law School of a portrait of Thayer, now hanging in the library of the Law School, being the gift of five of his most intimate friends, including Rand and Thompson.

Thomas has sold his 135 h.p. Mercedes, and has taken to the gentler occupation of hunting with the Myopia hounds of which Appleton is master. He wrote: "I have endeavored to keep up with him (Appleton) nearly killing myself trying to do so. There are doubtless others in the Class who are far better riders than I am, and if they have any idea that it is an easy matter to keep up with our classmate in the hunting field I should be glad to give them a chance anytime they will visit Myopia in the hunting season. I have been very close to Jimmy on numerous occasions, but the trouble is I cannot stay there until the finish.

"I am told that farming is a safe game as one grows older, and it keeps your feet on the ground where they should be, so the past season I purchased a farm at Ipswich, which I have named 'Monstone Farm' after a thoroughbred hunter which gave me the worst fall I ever had.

"My daughter is to be married on the first of June to Benjamin Perley Poore Mosely, and after that is over I expect to lead a very quiet life."

Grievance Committee. He is the joint editor (with Nathan Matthews, '75, and with Richard W. Hale, '92) of two articles published in the Harvard Law Review. He has also published articles in the Boston Medical and Surgical Journal and in the Massachusetts Law Quarterly. Much of his practice has been in jury trials, and he has given a good deal of attention to the question in what way the administration of justice in the courts of first instance in this country can be improved. On matters connected with this subject he has delivered addresses before the Massachusetts Medical Society and other medical societies, the Massachusetts Bar Association, the Boston City Club, and committees of the Legislature. He has been a lecturer at the Harvard Law School on brief-making and the preparation and trial of cases. He served as an Associate Member of the Legal Advisory Board of Boston.

Address 453 Marlborough Street, Boston, Mass.

Towle continues to practice medicine making a specialty of Dermatology. He is still on the staff of the Massachusetts General Hospital, and continues as consultant to the same institutions as formerly reported. At the Massachusetts General Hospital he holds the position of Dermatologist, and acts as head of that department for six months of each year. At the Harvard Medical School he fills the position of Associate. He is a member of the Medical Advisory Committee for the Penikese Hospital, State Board of Charity. This is the hospital where the state cares for persons suffering with leprosy. He has taught classes in the Harvard Graduate School of Medicine and in the School of Tropical Medicine. He regrets the sure evidence of advancing age expressed by the use of "sir" in the address of internes and students. He organized, under the direction of the Surgeon General's Office, a School of Intensive Training in Dermatology and Urology for Medical Reserve Officers. He had a volunteer faculty of twenty odd men and gave two groups of Medical Reserve Officers each a six weeks' course. In addition to this Towle was able to do some special Red Cross work especially in the matter of sending boxes to soldiers and workers overseas. As all others who undertook this work, he found it sometimes pathetic, sometimes humorous, and sometimes just ordinary. His experiences proved the truth of what a regular army man once said, that our expeditionary forces contained representatives of every known race and tongue both ancient and modern. In the course of his work Towle discovered from twenty to thirty Arabs who went overseas from Boston.
